The Nepalese Chhetri are a major ethnic group in Nepal. Although most are Hindu, there are significant numbers of Buddhists & Muslims. These groups have held on to their animistic beliefs recognizing local gods & goblins, spirits that haunt the crossroads & rivers. Offerings are made to these spirits in order to appease them.

The borders to Nepal have been opened for many years, yet Global Workers have found evangelism difficult due to strict government laws & scrutiny of foreigners.

Very few Chhetri in Nepal know Jesus. Christianity is seen as the "foreigners" religion. New believers are considered "untouchables" – the caste you do not mix with.
